SOMERSET COUNTY COURT - PROPERTY MEDIATION SERVICES

Frequently Asked Questions

What is property mediation?

Mediation is an alternative method of dispute resolution available to parties undergoing separation or divorce. The primary method of dispute resolution has been litigation, in which the separating or divorcing parties are adversaries and a Judge or Master makes the decisions for the parties. Mediation is different because the parties work together to decide between themselves what is best for them and their financial situation. The topic is restricted to property issues only. The Maryland Legislature has provided that the Court may not order mediation in any case where there is a genuine threat of physical or sexual abuse of one of the parties of the parties' children.

Who is the mediator?

SOMERSET COUNTY RESOURCE GUIDE

The mediator is not a judge, but helps the parties to decide on their own how to resolve their difference. There is a limit to how many mediation sessions the Court may order. For example, a Judge may only order two (2) sessions, and then later order two (2) more if deemed necessary. It is important for the mediator to have financial statements from both parties before the sessions are held. The Mediator is appointed by the Court from a list of court-approved Mediators. Each party has the right to decide whether to be represented by an Attorney. However, some private Mediators may request that the parties each engage Attorneys to represent them throughout the mediation process.

Where is the mediation process done?

The mediation process is conducted in the Mediator's office. When an agreement has been reached, the mediator must prepare a written draft of the agreement and forward copies of the agreement to the parties and their attorneys. The agreement may be approved or modified by the parties. The mediator then submits the agreement to the Court for approval and enters as an order. At that time, the agreement may be incorporated into the divorce decree. When an agreement has not been reached, the case will return to the Court for a decision by the Master or Judge. The mediator is forbidden to reveal to the Judge anything the parties discussed during the mediation process and may not be called as a witness.

What does it cost?

Mediation costs are usually based on an hourly rate or flat fee determined in the court order. Although there is a cost for mediation, it is possible that the overall cost of the separation or divorce will be less expensive if pursued through mediation than through litigation
